MUSEUM OF SCIENCE summer team learning projects kept these students busy including Susie Crocker, far right, of Cohasset but now, of course, it's back to the regular routine at school.

Suit Meeting Monday

By Dec. 31, 1981, complete construction of the treatment works.

The town has not met the first step of the schedule, nor will it meet the second, as the articles calling for the final plans and specifications of the Metcalf and Eddy proposed facility and site were voted down at Town Meeting.

"We have to start doing something because they (EPA) can start bringing suit against us," Montouri said. He was concerned that the current "lame duck" Board of Sewer Commissioners may hold up the progress of sewer expansion.

Montouri explained that the Town Meeting vote to separate the boards of Water and Sewer Commissioners automatically renders the current board's action as Sewer Commissioners out of office as of next election, a week after Town Meeting. (The elected board will remain as Water Commissioners.)

Montouri argued that a new board may not agree with the articles that the present board may choose to submit to Town Meeting. Therefore alternatives such as early resignation from the board as Sewer Commissioners is being considered, as is submission of an article for further sewage treatment facilities for consideration at a Special Town Meeting this fall.

What the current board favors proposing at the moment is still not clear. The joint meeting Sept. 10 will help to clarify some of the options available to the town. Montouri noted, however, that the present overloaded sewage treatment system pointed to the necessity to upgrade the existing plant or construction of a new treatment facility as proposed by the Metcalf and Eddy study. He concurred with Commissioner John Hobb's longstanding belief that waiting much longer on this issue may cut down on Cohasset's share of federal funds available for the project.

"People in favor of sewers must come forth in light of pending legal action that may be taken before the town," Montouri said. Although he and Water Superintendent Edwin Pratt didn't feel that the letter was as ominous as it sounded, they noted that the EPA has every right to enforce the recommended time schedule.

Pratt also noted that the final chapters of the Metcalf and Eddy study are expected to be submitted this month.
